As part of her research into students with print impairment accessing materials in higher education, and for her own personal development, Emma Rowlett will be taking some foundation-level algebra and calculus courses in the 2007/2008 academic year. She will be keeping a blog on her experiences as a student with a visual impairment studying university-level mathematics and this can be accessed through http://maths.accessingmaterials.org.uk.